Annual Conference Registration Rate Reduced
Member Early Bird Fee Just $595!

Conference Registration Fee Reduced
In an effort to make the 2010 Annual Education Conference as financially accessible to its members as possible, the NALP Board of Directors recently voted to lower the registration rate for the 2010 Annual Education Conference. The base rate for members registering before the early bird deadline will be $595. This is a reduction of nearly 20% from the registration rate for the 2009 conference in Washington, DC, and represents the lowest conference registration rate since the year 2000.

How Is This Possible?
NALP is committed to providing the same high quality educational experience that members have come to rely on. In order to achieve the savings necessary to offer members this exceptional rate, there will be some changes to the conference, the most noticeable of which is that breakfasts will no longer be provided as part of the conference registration fees. The main conference hotel offers a number of good options for breakfast, and members will be responsible for breakfast on their own each day. Lunches, however, will be provided as usual, and admission to the member celebration and the diversity reception will also be included in the price of registration.

Good News on Hotel Room Rates!
NALP has also been able to renegotiate the contracts with the San Juan hotels and the base rate for 90% of the rooms available to members during the conference will be priced at just $216 plus local taxes of 9%, for an effective room rate of $236. This rate is lower than the rates available during the previous two conferences.

The main conference hotel in San Juan also offers a number of excellent opportunities to share multi-bedroom units that can lower the per person effective room rate even further.

Registration will open in early December.
